

CALL for PHOTOS:

The Business & Human Rights Documentation Project www.B-HRD.org

Do you have photos that show the effects businesses have on human rights?
Consider donating them to the Business and Human Rights Documentation (B-HRD) Project.

BHRD.org is a new joint initiative of ESCR-Net and the Center for Human Rights and Global Justice (CHRGJ) at NYU School of Law. B-HRD is an interactive, multi-lingual information portal that will provide a much-needed legal and advocacy tool to better understand the relationship between business activities and human rights, and to assist in the development of progressive socially responsible business norms. B-HRD is comprised of a Database of human rights reports, an “In Focus” section, and a Working Papers series. The Project is designed to reach domestic and international non-governmental organizations, environmental groups, social movements, the media, United Nations officials, academics, the public at large, and businesses themselves. To ensure it is visually compelling, we are now soliciting donations of photographs for use on the website.

We are eager to receive your photos.

Please send them, along with a caption explaining what the photo depicts, to bhrdatabase@gmail.com.

You can also send them by post to:

Both ESCR-Net and CHRGJ are charitable organizations that depend to a large extent on external funding to support our projects. Due to limited funding we are unable to offer monetary compensation. Your donation of a license to use the photograph may, however, qualify as a charitable deduction for United States federal income tax purposes. We will gladly provide a receipt reflecting your donation.
